 Sat. 11am, Oct. 18 - Sat. midnite, Oct. 25

醉街拍檔
 Starring: Alan Tam, Tony Leung, Christy Chung, Francis Ng
 Directed by Chi Kar Lok
ACTION COMEDY

The Godfather saga returns in this wacky version of a reluctant gangster son (Alan Tam) summoned home to avenge his father's death. Christy Chung stars as a cat burglar who waddles a road gang and runs into playful troubles. Chung cons $2 million dollars from the gang using a fake Van Gogh. When a hitman from the mob (Tony Leung) trained in the drunken shooting style is sent to hunt her down, he finds himself unable to kill her. But the head of the family won't settle for anything short of her death, so Chung must elude the gang. 97 Aces Goes Places IV continues with the comedic antics of its prequel.

 Directed by Jeff Lau, 1997, 90 minutes
SLAPSTICK/MUSICAL COMEDY

A bizarre tale surrounding the legendary Black Rose a crazed woman who has imprisoned the man she loved for over 30 years in the hopes that he would someday reciprocate her love. A deliveryman falls for a beautiful dancer, but she owes $250,000 to a mad gang. However, the legendary 60's crimefighter Black Rose is also attracted to the delivery boy and impersonates the dancer to seduce and kidnap her. Now the dancer must fend for herself, until Black Rose decides to step in and challenge the crossdressing mad leader. A slapstick kung fu comedy with as many plot twists as Black Rose dragons! A real fun time!

 Sat. 11am, Nov. 1 - Sat. midnite, Nov. 8

Mr. Vampire IV
 Starring: Wu Ma, Anthony Chan, Loretta Lee, Yuen Wah
 Directed by Ricky Lau, 1987, 97 minutes
BACK BY POPULAR DEMAND, A HALLOWEEN FAVORITE!!

This great series commences with a fourth installment. More slapstick comedy than horror, Mr. Vampire IV starts out with a new Taoist priest feuding with his neighbor, a Buddhist monk. Neither of them can stand living next to each other, so they try to irritate each other as much as possible. The antics of the priest and monk are added on to the bumbling acts of their mischievous disciples. As soon as nearby villages are threatened by vampires, the priest and monk put aside their differences to team up and stop the undead. The series of films beginning with Mr. Vampire consolidated the success of the kung fu / ghost story genre, and confirmed its status as the predominant genre of the 80's. The Mr. Vampire series brought back to the Hong Kong movie scene a touch of traditional Chinese, not to mention superstition. It was this genre which brought outside "blood" into "vampire fever".

 Sat. 11am, Nov. 22 - Sat. midnite, Nov. 29

Enter the Dragon (tentative)
 Starring: Bruce Lee, Jim Kelly and John Saxon
 Directed by Robert Clouse, 1973
THE ORIGINAL MASTER

Released just after his death, the film put Bruce Lee on the Hollywood map. In order to break into the Hollywood market, Bruce plays a "James Bondish" type character. Unfortunately Enter the Dragon is also his last complete movie. Lee must compete in a secret martial arts tournament used as a cover for recruiting new henchmen for drug dealing. While on an island, Lee meets up with an old, family nemesis, and must deal with him and the island's deadly traps. The horror scene near the end of the film is one of the most spectacular light scenes between Bruce Lee and Shih Kien. (English version)

THE COPY-CAT
 CURATORS NOTE: After Tui Hark's Iron Monks, Donnie Yen took a career leap to risk a TV series. In the TV series Fists of Legend, Donnie plays the legendary Chen Zhen who is based on Bruce Lee's Fist of Fury (1972). He imitates Bruce Lee's lighting style, and with the success of the TV series, he established himself as a contemporary martial artist second only to Jet Li. He created the Wolf incorporating similar martial arts style. Donnie Yen's Iron Monks stars as "The Wolf" a legendary assassin who's being hunted by a young hitman for hire (Edmond Lau). The young hitman hot on the trail hooks up with the Wolf's loquacious sidekick (Donnie Wong) who serves as the tale's narrator.
