The Hitman

Directed by Stephen Tung (1998, 109 min.)
Starring Jet Li, Eric Tsang, Simon Yam, Gigi Young

Forget about Lethal Weapon IV, see the real Jet Li as he plays a would-be gunman hoping to catch the reward for killing the "Angel of Death," a do-gooder assassin wanted for slaying an evil tycoon. Hoping to impress the gangster world and win the big cash, Jet stalks the elusive assassin and competes with killers the world over, all vying for the sizable bounty. With scene-stealing support from Eric Tsang and, of course, over-the-top action sequences that one expects in the film of the sweetly demystified but breath-takingly and lethally dexterous Jet Li.

The Blacksheep Affairs

Directed by Ah Lum (1998, 104 min.)
Action/Director: Cheng Si Tung
Starring Zhao Wen Zhou, Huo Chi, Ken Wong, Hap Hui, Kenneth Tsang, Kong, Andrew Lin Ho

After his highly effective but bulldozer tactics in freeing hijacked hostages get him busted down on a procedural charge, Special Ann terrorist Agent Yen Dong gets stuck with body guard duty for the Chinese Ambassador in the former Soviet Republic of Laveria (as in Laveria and Shirley ah!) Therein, this maverick terrorist butt-kicker tangles with a sinister Japanese cult leader armed with a world destroying plot. James Bond's movie, but with goodball nationalism, characterizations, for sure, but with ace choreographer Cheng Si Tung at the action helm, the lights, stunts, and martial arts are gloriously dynamic.

Beast Cop

Directed by Gordon Chan (1998, 105 min.)
Michael Wong, Michael Fitzgerald Wong, Anthony Wong, Kathy Chow, Roy Cheung, Patrick Tam

Beast Cop presents a police precinct gone corrupt: the cops working in sync with the local mad. Michael Wong plays a steadfastly good cop transferred to this new precinct, presided over by brute cop Anthony Wong and must learn the new code in order to survive. Still employing his over-the-top trademark violence, Director Chan shoots this tale of gang warfare and blurred blue lines in a remarkably raw, gritty style, representative of the one high politics look characterizing HK's new revisionist crime melodrama.

The Big Heat

Directed by Johnny To & Andrew Kam (1988, 99 min.)
Produced by Tsui Hark
Starring Wong Lee, Philip Kwok, Joey Wong, Chu Kong, Matthew Wong

Like the Fritz Lang movie of the same title, this Tsui Hark production of Gordon Chan script is a movie driven by the rage of its central character: An extremely violent tale of a desperate cop. The Big Heat presents Waise Lee as a cop who injures his hand, leaving it all but disabled in a job-related accident. Nerves frazzled, his physical condition deteriorating, he nevertheless stays on the force - for one last case - to solve the brutal murder of his associate. Considered remarkably extreme in its violence, even by HK yardsticks, the movie's over the top gory action telegraphs the desperate anger of the avenging cop.

The Lucky Guy

Directed by Lee Lik-Chi (1998, 100 min.)
Starring Stephen Chiu, Sing Chi, Eric Kot, Man-Fai, Daniel Chan Hu-Tung, Sammi Cheng, Sau Man, Krazy Young, Kung Fu

Romance has rendered life in the Lucky Cake Shop is all askew as the three male employees find their lives complicated by pursuits of love. Ladykiller Sam - the baker con cro, known as Lucky Egg Tart - pines for Candy his first love. Delivery boy Fook has fallen for a martial artist, and Nam, the owner of the son of the baker shop, is bewitched by Fon Fon, the strange street girl. Both sugary sweet and, with Chiu on board hilariously funny.

Handsome Siblings

Directed by Eric Tsang (1992, 105 min.)
Starring Andy Lau, Brigitte Lin, Cheng Man, Ng Man-rot, Deanne Yip, Anita Yuen, Francis Ng

A comedy-action costume period piece set in Tang Dynasty China, Andy Lau plays a warlord's son who enters a martial arts competition in an attempt to clear the names of his eight guardsmen. Untouchable Villains all - who had been wrongly imprisoned for a crime they did not commit. Lau teams up with his step sister - played by Brigitte Lin - to do battle for paternal. Worth the skies for lots of high flying action.

Moon Warriors

Directed by Sammo Hung (1992, 110 min.)
Action Director: Cheng Si Tung
Starring Andy Lau, Kerry Dee, Anita Mui, Maggie Cheung

When the exiled emperor is betrayed by his power hungry brother, the emperor in exile calls upon the services of a fisherman/martial artist. Complications ensue, however: when the fisherman falls for the emperor's fiancée, and the exiled emperor's bodyguard reveals her love for the fisherman! As the foursome try to work out their romantic problems, troubles of a more sinister sort appear... Action masters Sammo Hung and Cheng Si Tung create a high flying adventure!

The Hero

Directed by Corey Yuen (1997, 100 min.)
Starring Takeshi Kaneshiro, Yuen Biao, Valerie Chow, Yuen Wah

The Hero is usually stunning film in the tradition of Tsui Hark's original Once Upon A Time in China. After a severe drought, Ma Wing Jung (Takeshi Kaneshiro) and Tan Cheung (Yuen Wah) leave Shaanxi for Shanghai. Forced to work as coolies, Ma, a fierce fighter, soon takes control and becomes a famous underworld figure. Ma's swift rise to power leaves him ill prepared to deal with the underworld, and in the end, he must pay a bloody price for his success. This powerful martial arts thriller combines state of the art combat sequences with rich characters and plot.

Too Many Ways to Be Number 1

Directed by Wai Ka-Fai (1997, 95 min.)
Starring Lau Ching Wai, Francis Ng, Carmen Lee

One of the most highly acclaimed movies from HK in some time, Too Many Ways to Be Number 1 has been praised for the larling and trio of its spirited narrative, and visual excessiveness, a combination that has prompted comparisons to Tarantino and Léon. These gangster goodballs madly vent to kill their own boss - they run over him twice and, on their clueless own, must attempt to complete, i.e. screw-up, one job after the next. An exhilarating collection of absurdly violent episodes, this road movie must be seen for its originality and general strangeness.

Full Alert

Directed by Ringo Lam (1997, 99 min.)
Starring Lau Ching Wai, Peter Yung, Kam Cheung, Chi Kar-lok, Monica Cai, Fat Tung

Cop Lau Ching Wai does battle with his nefarious opposite Francis Ng in this highly-acclaimed post-Yan Dämme Ringo Lam cop and robbers psychotriller. Highly polished, genuinely compelling, and emotionally unsettling, Full Alert is one of the best efforts from the director of Call of Fire and Full Contact. Hong Kong International Film Festival (all it an "explosive thriller" and says "The sense of urgency in Lam's guerrilla filmmaking in the streets captures the Hong Kong hot in all its intense glory."

Storm Warriors

Directed by Andrew Lau (1998, 100 min.)
Starring Dior Cheng, Aaron Kwok, Krazy Young

The long-awaited new film, Storm Warriors (Fung Wan) which features two top pop stars, Dior Cheng and Aaron Kwok, will be released in Hong Kong this summer. It took over a year to produce and has finally completed the post-production and special effects. The film is adapted from the popular cartoon "Fung Wan" and is a classic sword film movie with many amazing special effects. Involved in a conspiracy, Dior and Aaron's friendship is put to the test.
