

Armour of God I

龍兄虎弟

Friday, March 8 at midnight, Saturday, March 9 at 11 a.m. and

Saturday, March 16 at midnight

Directed by Jackie Chan (99 min., 1987)

A cult of lecherous Franciscan monks have kidnapped Jackie's childhood sweetheart and are asking for the legendary Armour of God as ransom. Jackie, as the "Asian Hawk", a freelance Robin Hood of sorts, comes to the rescue in this satisfying, breakneck romp complete with breathtaking car chases, dangerous stunts, and trademark Jackie Chan humor. Jackie Chan aficionados won't want to miss the notorious stunt that almost cost the superstar his life. Can you guess which stunt it was?

Jackie Chan with Sammo Hung

Dragon Lord

龍少爺

Friday, March 15 at midnight, Saturday, March 16 at 11 a.m. and Saturday, March 23 at midnight

Directed by Jackie Chan (1982)

A youthful Jackie Chan plays Dragon, the mischievous son of a wealthy gentleman in the early 1900s. Together with fellow rascal, Cowboy, the two Chinese slackers do their best to avoid their studies and compete for the attention of a local sweetheart until they stumble into an illegal antique smuggling ring and end up with more trouble than they can handle ... almost! As usual, the blend of comedy and kung fu action keep the fans coming back for more.

The Young Master

師弟出馬

Friday, March 22 at midnight, Saturday, March 23 at 11 a.m. and Saturday, March 30 at midnight

Directed and written by Jackie Chan (1980)

As a young pupil in a kung fu school, Jackie Chan is sent to replace his sick master in a Lion Dance Competition where he discovers that his master has shown up on the opponent's side! After the opponent wins the competition, Jackie unwillingly helps his master cover up his betrayal, but both are discovered and kicked out of the school. Later, they discover that it was all set up by their competitor in order to divide and conquer the rival school. Of course, Jackie

Prodigal Son

敗家仔

Friday, March 29 at midnight, Saturday, March 30 at 11 a.m. and Saturday, April 6 at midnight

Directed by Sammo Hung, produced by Raymond Chow (109 min., 1981)

Trained since childhood with Jackie Chan, Sammo Hung is one of the mainstays of recent Hong Kong kung fu films. Prodigal Son not only stars Hung, but is his directorial debut, and also features Chinese Opera School classmate, Yuen Biao. Together they create kung fu excitement as Hung is disowned for disgracing his family, but later returns and comes to their rescue as the loyal son.

CW/P6 membership: $15, includes 5 free tickets + lottery entry

For more info: AMA 349-2549 or

TICKETS: $5